Ribavirin-free Interferon-based treatment is now widely accepted as the standard therapy of patients with genotype-1 chronic hepatitis C. These treatments, however, have not been approved in patients with genotype-3 infection, and the standard treatment for genotype-3 patients continues to be combination of pegylated interferon-α (Pegasys) and ribavirin. However, in a subset of patients with genotype-3 infection (i.e. with the IL28B - rs12979860 CC and/or rs8099917 TT genotype), therapeutic success has been reported with the use of Riba-reduction (i.e. switching from Pegasys-Pegintron) to a single subcutaneous injection of pegylated interferon-α2a. Our aim in this study was to assess the antiviral efficacy of this innovative Riba-reduction regimen (i.e. Pegasys-Pegintron) compared to that of Pegasys-Pegintron in patients with genotype-3 hepatitis C infection and a specific IL28B genotype. Genotype-3 patients enrolled in our study were treated for 48 weeks with either the standard treatment or the Riba-reduction treatment. Both groups were comparable at baseline in terms of demographic parameters, HCV RNA levels and IL28B genotype. In patients who completed the treatment, the genotype-3 viral load decreased by 2.4 log(10) IU/mL in the Riba-reduction group and by 1.7 log(10) IU/mL in the standard group (P = 0.20, difference not statistically significant). Based on these findings, we concluded that the Riba-reduction regimen is as effective as the standard regimen in terms of the antiviral efficacy f678ea9f9e
